DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-5 and 24, drawn to a methylotrophic recombinant yeast strain capable of producing a human insulin precursor, and a method of making said yeast strain, classified in class 435, subclass 483.
- II. Claims 6-23, drawn to a DNA construct comprising a 5' regulatory region, a signal sequence, a sequence encoding a human insulin precursor and a functional termination sequence, all in operable linkage to each other, classified in class 536, subclass 23.1.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions Group I and Group II are related as combination and subcombination.

Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the combination (methylotrophic yeast strain) is claimed as capable of being made using constructs that are not commensurate with the constructs of Group II. In this instance, Claim 1 is an evidence claim that indicates that the combination does not require the particulars of the subcombination for its patentability because the particular details of the subcombination are not recited in the evidence claim. It is noted that if the evidence claim is found to be unallowable, the question of rejoinder of inventions will be considered with respect to the scope of the evidence claim in relation to the claimed subcombinations. See MPEP § 806.05©, particularly sections I and III. The subcombination has separate utility, such as a template for the polymerase chain reaction amplification of a human insulin precursor gene (e.g., for cloning into a different construct), or as a cloning vector for the construction of signal sequence gene fusions to a gene of interest (by using the cloning sites used for operably linking the human insulin precursor to the indicated signal sequence and termination sequence).

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper. Furthermore, especially in instances where the classifications are the same, the non-patent literature searches required for each of these inventions are not co-extensive, hence said searches would be burdensome. Therefore restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
